Tracy joined Deep South in 2007 with a diverse background including insurance, teaching pre-school, radiology, and pharmacology. Her diverse background gives her valuable skills and tools that she can leverage in the safety and loss control arena. Her background in science gives her the analytical skills to be successful, while her former teaching position gives her the ability to educate, communicate, and relate information. While Tracy has learned much about the insurance business, she continues to learn more about premium audit, underwriting, claims, and loss control. In her current role she works directly with the Vice President of Loss Control, field staff, and is responsible for the administration of loss control processes and procedures.

Tracy attended the Radiologic Technology School at LSU Health Sciences Center. After completing her classes at the Health Sciences Center, she obtained her Certificate of Radiologic Technology. Tracy has also received a Pharmacy Technician license while working for an independent pharmacist. After receiving her license, she spent 12 years working in the retail pharmacy industry. Tracy's technical skills include working with applications such as Microsoft Word, Excel, and PowerPoint.

In her spare time, she enjoys spending time with her two children, singing, and photography.
