Deep South Web-Based Safety Training Provides Companies With Powerful Safety Education

One of the most significant aspects of providing professional safety training to employees in today's business world is finding the time in tight schedules to provide safety training to employees that may be scattered across multiple locations. Deep South helps to address these challenges with leading edge web-based training that can be utilized by your employees anywhere anytime. The technology platform and web-based safety videos are developed and provided by CLMI, one of the nation's leading safety training companies. Other important points about this advanced training solution include:

- Reduced training time
- Enhances training effectiveness, employee productivity and employee retention
- Enables flexible training at locations spread across a wide geographic area at any time
- Extensive library of safety topics
- Full-screen, broadcast quality video for impact and relevance
- Short, effective programs (25-45 minutes) hold learner interest
- Available in broad-band or dial-up configurations
- Fully interactive design compels student engagement for greater retention
- Complies with OSHA standards
- Available 24/7 at dispersed locations, no need to coordinate classroom sessions
- Web-based program means no installation and limited or no IT support required
- Requires Internet Explorer 8 or later and a simple CLMI video player download

How Can My Company Take Advantage of Deep South's Web-Based Safety Training?
